DRESS IN PHILIPPINES.

Many Questions Asked of the Bureau of Insular Affairs.

In an effort to avoid being an information bureau as to how women may dress and retain their beauty in the Philippines, the bureau of Insular Affairs is considering the publication of a manual which will contain all possible information required by persons about to make a trip to the insular possessions.

"Shall I take wooden gowns with me?" "Is it positively necessary to refrain from eating meat to preserve one's complexion in Manila?" and "What sort of underwear is most desirable in the Philippines?" are typical of the inquiries which pour in upon the officials of the bureau. Women teachers and the wives of army officers and civilian employees who are about to start for the islands are constantly seeking information about the conditions they must face on the voyage and after their arrival in the islands. The British government issues a book which answers all possible questions concerning the needs of persons entering government service in the tropics, and a similar publication will doubtless be prepared by this government.

Because of the cool weather on the Pacific coast and for the first part of the voyage into the far east a great variety of clothing is required, and many precautions are necessary to pass with comfort from the cool to the tropical climate. The manual will endeavor to make all this clear. Among the school teachers who recently sailed from this country for the Philippines was one young woman who failed to take many articles of wearing apparel which her family afterward found she would need. A man school teacher who is about to start for the islands offered to take the young woman's clothing in his baggage, but insisted that her parents write to the bureau of Insular Affairs and explain the situation that a round-up with customs officials may be avoided. The result was a letter which is filled with many suggestions for a farce.

Mary S. Corby filed suit for divorce in Hagerstown, Md., from Philip L. Corby, both of Williamsport. They were married in this city in 1902.

FEW TO BE SEEN NOW.

A "Bike Cop" Comments on Disappearance of the Woman Cyclist.

"There she goes now—the first I have seen today," exclaimed one of Major Sylvester's neatly-appearing bike cops on Pennsylvania avenue, to a Star man on a balcony afternoon recently.

"She-who?" was asked of the long-hosed, short-trousered young giant in blue.

"That rara avis, the lady bicyclist," responded the officer. "Talk about mysterious disappearances," he continued, "the time was not so very long ago when the lady bicyclist used to pass The Star corner on this elongated parade ground of the nation at the rate of a dozen a minute, and now, do you believe it, sometimes whole days go by and not a single one shows up to relieve the monotony."

"Where have they gone? That's the question. A few years ago there were thousands of them in this city; today I don't believe there are fifty all told in the District. The ladies have certainly done shook the wheel. With that charming changeableness of the sex, where every mother's daughter of 'em once rode a wheel, now you can't evidently induce one to try. Scores of them used to ride to the Post Office Department across the avenue every day to office, while now I notice but one solitary female who has the courage to remind us that once our fair sisters used to grace the asphalt with their sweet presence. I consider it a remarkable metamor-phosist of the traffic on our streets.

"The men? Oh, yes, the men still ride, and there is, I understand, a good, healthy regular demand for men's wheels, though, of course, most of the men and boys now riding do so less for pleasure and more in the nature of business than of yore. But the ladies, too, work just the same, but they have certainly out the wheel either for business or for pleasure—hey there, you—here the young giant made a dive for his own wheel, which up to that moment had stood against the curb, and gave a hasty pursuit after a sporting automobile which was speeding up the street at an unlawful gait. Things have changed with the bike cops, too.

Post Office Relief Association.

At the recent annual meeting of the Post Office Department Immediate Benefit Association the reports of the officers showed a membership of 778. Five thousand one hundred dollars was paid to the beneficiaries of seventeen deceased members during the year and $92 was paid for expenses. The officers elected were: President, Merritt O. Chance, chief clerk; vice president, Dr. William E. Corbin; secretary, Jacob B. Derrick; treasurer, John W. Holtzway.

Directors: Lee S. Morrison, William C. Beck, E. S. Hall, Charles A. Conrad, William F. Chester, Alphonse Girouard.

"It matters little what it is that you want—a situation or a servant—a 'want' ad. in The Star will reach the person who can fill your need.

PERILS OF EGG ROLLING.

Many Cases of Illness From Playing on the Damp Grounds.

"While the observance of what is now known as 'egg rolling day' may be considered fixed," said a prominent Washington specialist to a Star man at the east gate of the White House grounds, as he drew up in his buggy to watch the crowd of happy children within the iron-railed enclosure, on occasion of the latest egg rolling, "as a physician I have a word to say regarding its effects, though having no desire to detract from the occasion: 'My comment on the custom is the same as sustains the popular objection to the existing date of the inaugural ceremonies—it is out of season. Every year, since I make a specialty of children's afflictions, I am called in many cases of illness of children, the cause of which I am able to localize and trace directly to the sitting and playing upon the damp ground at the egg-rolling exercises for an unusual length of time.

"Were these exercises to take place in July or August, when the ground is usually hard and dry and the grass free from the well-known dampness of early spring, there could be no objection upon the score to which I refer. Today the ground is still soggy from the drenching rain of Saturday night, and at this early season of the year the soil is at all times very damp and cold. The little ones remain out of doors upon this day for hours, a thing they are not all accustomed to, rolling about on the grass or sitting down. Colds and complaints, incidental to children, of a more serious nature are likely to result from this direct contact, and more or less exposure. I recall that in some years the weather has been really severe. Picnic festivities of this kind for little children in early April would be about the very last recommendation of a physician, though the graciousness of the President in throwing open the grounds of the White House, providing music and making the occasion one of delight to the tots and their accompanying guardians, is fully appreciated."

Prayer Failed to Save Mother.

Without medical attendance Mrs. Harry Eugene Cantell, wife of the overseer for the United Kingdom, died in childbirth at Elijah Hospice at Zion City, Ill., while prayers were being offered for her restoration to help and strength. Cantell is a follower of Voliva. The tenets of the Christian Apostolic Church in Zion teach that all healing must come from God, and there are no doctors in Zion City except two or three who have renounced their profession. At Elijah Hospice, which is a hotel as well as a resort for those who visit the city in search of healing, strangers who learned of Mrs. Cantell's serious illness urged Overseer Cantell to summon a physician, but he refused, saying that both he and his wife placed their faith in God and trusted only to healing by divine power.
